

My Great-Grandparents Wedding

My artifact is a picture of my great-grandparents wedding. Their names are Herman and Dora Marshik. They got married on October 20, 1925. It is very different from what people wear now.

My great grandma has a knee length dress on. She has a big bouquet. She has this weird, intricate, pearl-like head piece on. Her veil is like a normal one but it is tied with a piece of veil material right above her eyes all the way around her head. The picture is black and white. She has long sleeves on her dress. She has a flower on the top of her dress. She has these maybe lace, maybe beads, maybe sequins, patterns on her dress. She has three connected pearl necklaces. My great grandpa looks the same as what people look like now.

I would like to see it preserved for the future. So that the future can see what it was like back then. So the future will see what their ancestors looked like. So people know what people dressed like back then. So people will know what people wore at their wedding back then.

-Addison M.

