

My Grandpa's Fishing Lure

My artifact captures a moment in time because I have heard so many stories about it. My grandpa made it and we have it on a shelf because we don't want to use it and lose it. My dad has told me stories about him and my grandpa spearing with it. I have talked to him about it and the stories are very cool.

It connects my family because my dad was there when my grandpa made it. My dad also helped make it. My dad had also told me that he had tried to make lures before and on all of the ones that he tried to make the paint would not stay on. My dad had fished with it but he stopped because he didn't want to ruin it.

If it had been used still it depends on how much fish would have hit it there might have been dents on it. My grandpa would always use it and it was his favorite lure to use. My dad and grandpa would always go fishing together and now my siblings and I go with my dad. It reflects change because now we go with my dad, and dad used to go with grandpa.

My dad told me about the lure when I was trying to figure out something to do for this project.
